Name: Alex Moore

Team member

Job title: Senior Lecturer in Clinical Pharmacy, University of Sunderland and primary care pharmacist

Alex graduated from the University of Sunderland in 2016 before undertaking a split pre-registration year in community pharmacy and academics. Since qualification, Alex has worked in both community pharmacy and general practice and today is working much of his time in general practice. He is involved a patient facing role where he is responsible for reviewed complex patients with polypharmacy and ensuring ongoing safe medicines use. He is pursuing his independent prescribing in asthma and will aim to complete this in early 2022, with further development on respiratory medicine following this.

Alex also works at the University of Sunderland, as a senior lecturer in clinical pharmacy. He was previously a teacher practitioner where he utilises his practice experience to contribute to the education of undergraduate MPharm students. He has a strong interest in the education of future pharmacists and is passionate about ensuring he is part of a process which ensures that safe and effective future pharmacists are produced.

Alex is currently undergoing his MSc in clinical pharmacy and is interested in research. His main area of interest is improving patient care using digital technologies.
